KING'S DAUGHTERS.

The Origin of the Order and its Growth.

STORY OF A KING'S DAUGHTER.

What They are Now Doing in Atlanta.

The King's Daughter.
Her eyes are soft and pure as prayers,
I meet her in the market places,
A basket on her arm she bears,
Containing fruit and fancy pastries,
With which she can garnish her lips,
But little eyes grow old and aching,
Along she's never making.

Then, later, in the day I see
Her sitting in the piazza,
A woman's noble character,
The wretched hovels in the city,
The hospitable presence known,
Or the skill of the physician,
And seeing her I surely know,
This is the highest mission.

She ministers to souls that grieve
And hearts that are with sorrow sobbing,
While I but struggle to relate
The scenes of woe and throbbing.
Her woman's art I faint well learn,
To read her traces I should endeavor,
Or the secret of her power,
Her touch for us forever.

My love-learn looks she will not heed;
She'll have my heart to saving slowly;
She shall be forced my heart to read,
I'll send for her when lying lowly;
To see her I'll surely go to see,
I'll tell her how my heart is pleading
A hungry beggar verily.
That's all her solace needing.

—Maudie Amble Andrews

Two years ago ten good women in the city of New York clasped hands and said: "We will do our charity in the name of the King we serve. We will call ourselves the daughters of the King, and, making an order by the hands those who will join us in other lands shall be joined with us in heart and spirit, until the whole order shall become as one woman's soul sending its incense of good deeds up to God."

During the two years since this small meeting of women, the order of the King's Daughters has grown and strengthened over north and south. In every village there are bands doing good work. In the commencement of the work the idea of having one symbol for all the different bands was a sensible and beautiful one.

A children's society has been formed in several cities, and does a great deal of good work. The society brings up the daughters of infirmities and dying into the heart of a child, and some touching incidents of self sacrifice have been revealed. One little King's Daughter denied herself a full summer long, taking her share from the tankards of the rich in a hospital. Another girl sick with ice all summer bought with money saved.

Some interesting stories are told concerning the King's Daughters in New York. Of course the society is not perfect, and when she and when she are so many rich girls, a great deal of good must be accomplished. One day I was going through Bellevue hospital with a friend who was one of the house physicians. I said:

"You know all about the charities here. Tell me of the King's Daughters. Do you think they are doing much good?"

"Well, the first King's Daughters I saw," he said, "were composed of a lot of young girls who came in to walk through the bands. I thought them interesting, silly, etc. They pulled at their little, lace-trimmed ribbons and crossed, and talked incessantly of the good they were doing and the good they were going to do while I followed, thinking how, if an intelligent individual like the doctor went about it, a lot about a week after this the house physician sent me word to go down to the reception room and attend the wants of a young woman waiting there."

"Are you the house physician?" I questioned a full fresh voice, as fair young girl arose to greet me.

"Yes, I'm one of the many house physicians here. What can I do for you?"

"I want to get a sick girl room, and I want her to have privacy, room, and attention. She was one of our passengers, and she left some months ago when I was away. She said she was not strong. I looked for her when I returned, and found her in a wretched hovel wasting away with consumption, and when she left, she told me the cause of his wasted condition

"One evening I was out driving, and met the carriages of a rich man. A woman among them seemed desperately ill, and he had such a kind, innocent face. The memory of him haunted me all night. I was trying to think of some way of getting him released, but I was sure he was innocent. I went out the next day to the man's chamber, and the convicts about the one who was so excited my sympathy the day before. The man seems sick and looks very pitiful. I want to do something for him," I said. "I'm sure he must be ill, and I'll call on him again to see if he will be helped."

"Yes, he's pretty sick," the keeper replied, "but he's a right bad man. He killed his wife in cold blood, and that's what he's here for."

"My mother and I," said Mrs. Wylie, "raised a sick confidence man once, and when he left, he told me the cause of his wasted condition

"It was by this beautiful rule that the women of our city are working. They will have their trials and will be ungrateful, but there are many poor people who will appreciate their kindness as long as life lasts. Mrs. Dickson's hand have paid their debts and a bank account.

"No, I couldn't bear to think of that," she said, shaking her beautiful head. "It was sick like that girl, I couldn't bear to put in a great room with a lot of other sick people. I know Maggie wouldn't like it better than I."

"It came home to me that this girl had struck the highest note in the scale of charity. I had seen so much of ostentation, fashionable religion among women that I might have become a skeptic in regard to their piety, had I not been here to see the sight of good, quiet workers going daily in the sun, their mood of cheer and help. I knew well the visiting women who came with tact and solemn faces, it is a sore trial to any but the strongest stomach. "Splicing the main brace," as the imbibition of a glass is jocularly termed by sailors, is a poor substitute for the swallowing of that incomparably tranquilizer of seasick stomachs, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which no commercial traveler, tourist or invalid should without in "crossing the briny," or making tedious land journey. No unmedicated sailor can be comparable for efficacy to the great infirmities. Bagoes to the west pronounces it a reliable relief to malarial infection, as well as other complaints to which hardship, impure water and unseasoned vapors give rise. It renders brashik water drinkable, and is a fine remedy for disorders of the stomach and bowels, and for kidney trouble and rheumatism.

"Shall I take your name and address in case the girl would wish to see you or send some message when she comes?" I asked.

"Oh! never mind about that," she said. "I'll be here to take this purse and supper needs if she wants anything extra."

The girl was brought in a carriage on pillows. She was horribly emaciated and had that unearthly, weird loveliness peculiar to the consumptive. Her eyes shone like blue stars in the midst of her pale, emaciated face. The red lips often drew convulsively over the brilliant teeth, as though compelling the fast-sobbing life to stay. She could scarcely speak, being too weak every instant by a long, thin, as if it would tear the frail body asunder as a lily is torn by the east wind. I wanted to know the name of her benefactress, but hadn't the heart to question her again.

The pretty girl came the next morning, bringing a bunch of roses, such as a wealthy girl would purchase for a bouquet upon an occasion. They were Marechal Neel and jacquemont buds, more precious to the heart of a fair flower than gold and rubies. The sick girl gazed upon the eyes of the donor, leaned over and kissed her fair, brown, soft lips, and waited around the hall till the fair visitor opened the door and went her way. I shall never forget how she looked that day. It was winter. She wore a grey cloth gown, with a blue cloth hat perched upon the fair hair. Beneath its trim gold, wind-blown ringlets ran riot. The fair complexion shaded into amethyst pink in cheeks and dimpled chin.

The mouth was large and laughing, and the eyes were dark, brilliant. I can't say anything more, because when I tell you she's my wife now, you'll understand that her eyes mean more to me than any words can tell.

After the left that day I went right to the side of the girl and told her to be bright and better. I couldn't resist asking her about this unusual young woman who brought ten dollar bouquets to sick maids.

"Her name is Miss R—," answered Maggie. "Her father is a very rich man, but, oh! I'm sorry. I didn't do the right act. Miss R— is what they call a King's Daughter, and she gives all her pocket money helping people. She doesn't say so, but I know it, because when I lived with them poor people were always coming to her and she was helping them. I think she's a good girl, and I told father scolding, and saying if she was going to spend her money on vagabonds he'd cut off her allowance. She's an angel, is Miss R—, and she never talks about what she does. She asked me not to tell her name."

I was very glad that promise was not kept, for after some time I found Miss R—'s address and called on her, and it all finally ended in making me the happiest man on earth."

"Does your wife still keep up her charities?" I asked.

"She does more now than ever, because being with me, she finds out more about the needs of the sick and afflicted. She is the head of a King's Daughter's band here. It is different from the others. She calls meetings to make assignments to each girl, directing the work she wishes done and the girls' reports of their work are given to her alone. No girl knows what the other has done, or is doing, unless they happen to meet each other."

THE ATLANTA KING'S DAUGHTERS.

A meeting of the King's Daughters was held yesterday morning at Mrs. William Dickson's, and a great deal of interest manifested. The speakers present were Mrs. Dickson, Mrs. Lollo Bello Wylio, Misses Della Foraker, Maude Rude, Lilly Orme, Jessie Culpepper, Annie Lou Winter, Eva Winter, Emma Lee English, Annie May May, and Mrs. Anna C. Williams. Mrs. Dickson has been supporting a mother and three children at the Industrial home, and they will have to attend the wants of three more needy children whose mother is ill and helpless. Mrs. Dickson leaves soon for the summer, and the King's Daughters will leave the work in their hands, expecting one of the hand to leave the home once a week. She gave each girl two cards to be signed by any friends who would agree to contribute twenty-five cents a month to help good work in the Industrial and Locomotive bands.

Mrs. Dickson will return in September, and then entertainments will be given for the benefit of the charities in which her band is interested.

Mrs. Grady, Mrs. Peel, and many other ladies have offered their homes to the King's Daughters for entertainments.

Mrs. Dickson spoke of hospitals and the interest she felt in them. She said her band had helped in the movement, and that at present, their bands help in the Industrial home of children, the most important work in other poor persons needing them. Miss Foraker told a touching story of a destitute family in the Presbyterian mission. She said:

"It was a large family. I don't know how many, but there were ten children, and they were poor and too proud to beg. The mother was bedridden and the father was prostrated by illness. A poor street driver discovered their destitution and supplied them with provisions for many weeks."

Sometimes good women make funny mistakes about their charity and kindheartedness. Mrs. Dickson said:

"One evening I was out driving, and met the carriages of a rich man. A woman among them seemed desperately ill, and he had such a kind, innocent face. The memory of him haunted me all night. I was trying to think of some way of getting him released, but I was sure he was innocent. I went out the next day to the man's chamber, and the convicts about the one who was so excited my sympathy the day before. The music—and an excellent organization it is—arrested the 3d, and it was decided that when a hospital was built, Mrs. Dickson's band should take a ward for their sick from the Industrial home of children, the most important work in other poor persons needing them. I was trying to think of some way of getting him released, but I was sure he was innocent. I went out the next day to the man's chamber, and the convicts about the one who was so excited my sympathy the day before. The music—and an excellent organization it is—arrested the 3d, and it was decided that when a hospital was built, Mrs. Dickson's band should take a ward for their sick from the Industrial home of children, the most important work in other poor persons needing them. Miss Foraker told a touching story of a destitute family in the Presbyterian mission. She said:

"It was a large family. I don't know how many, but there were ten children, and they were poor and too proud to beg. The mother was bedridden and the father was prostrated by illness. A poor street driver discovered their destitution and supplied them with provisions for many weeks."

BRIDES AND GROOMS.

Vain Effort of Cooing Doves to Appear Experienced.

THE WOODS FULL OF THEM.

An Unprecedented Rush of Newly-Married People to White Sulphur Springs.

GREENBRIER WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, W.

Va., July 1.—The routes of all June nuptials now lead to White Sulphur, at any rate it is true of the year 1888, for the woods hereabouts are filled with brides and grooms. Not within the memory of the oldest attaches of this venerable resort have there been so many novices in wedded life here at one time; in truth, the timid venturers have taken possession and the most distinctive feature of the place now is the high state of bliss to be observed, no master which way you may turn. This is all very well in the eyes of those young persons who contemplate from no great distance the rising star of connubial happiness, but when we turn to the glorious mornings and the superb evenings make the contemplation of living very self-satisfying. A few glasses of nature's own sulphur cocktails from the limpid springs, and a brisk little walk in the pure mountain air gives one a therapeutic for breakfast, and makes attendants legs wobble before he has calmed his ferociousness and you are no less ready for dinner because you have eaten prodigiously in the morning. You have one more to go, and I consider that my imitation of the fat boy of fiction has been most successful. There is nothing else to do. Forty-three brides and forty-three grooms would seem from a theoretical point of view to be an extremely delightful novel. Well, they are, I have no doubt, but not as a whole.

The clique arrangement prevails to such an extent that I will not be surprised when I find that the gathering, which follows the honeymoon, is a gathering of no third person as a participant. I have spoken to a number of new husbands in a charming conversational tone, but they treated me to a unit as though I were a confirmed man and ruler away to see if my wife was not only or was frightened at a bug, or that some other awful calamity had not befallen her. "It's no use, Algry," I said to myself, and immediately sought consolation in sulphur water and in the music of the mountains and the genuine article of Virginian darky—a source of never failing interest which abounds here in unknown quantities.

To a man who seeks health or rest the lack of matrimonial consciousness is a source of infinite trouble. It is a constant communion with the lowliest and greatest in nature, and you imbibe strength, mental and physical, with every draught of medicinal water.

There are always nearly a hundred very agreeable people here other than our newly-married sojourners, and there is no lack of facilities for the latter. The chief charm and peculiarity of White Sulphur since its inception as a watering place. This is due in a measure to the large patronage the resort receives from Virginia and the south generally; and also to the cultured and kindly people of the north and other states, so many of whom are found here every year.

THE GLORIOUS FOURTH

How Your Uncle William Arp Spent the Day.

REBELLIONS AT A DISCOUNT

Arp Talks About Various Other Matters.

The 4th of July is a big thing. We had forgotten that it was so big and it is a good sign that our people are waking up to it again. The first rebellion gave it birth and we were proud of it but the last was such a failure and brought so much trouble that rebellions were at a discount and we quit celebrating—we hung our hats on the willows and like the Jewish captives, refused to sing the Lord's song in a strange land, but we are all harmonizing now and it is a good sign to see our people celebrating the same old Fourth. The first rebellion was against the South. The boys whopped him but when the boys got to fighting with another with no ocean between is a different thing. The first declaration of independence that great secession document was conceived at Williamsburg, Va., in the old Raleigh tavern, but it had to go over to Philadelphia to be born, because there was a big bell there. I reckon Williamsburg was the seat of government of the Virginia colony, and the declaration was read there on the 1st of June, by Thomas Jefferson to the house of burgesses, and a more solemn scene was never witnessed. There was no hilarity, no gush, no enthusiasm. The whole thing was like a funeral. Love for the fatherland, and the like, were the only feelings that were in a big sense of his tyranny and oppression. The older members dreared to cut the cords that bound them, and had the declaration been left to a quiet vote it never would have carried, but when Patrick Henry got up and said, "I move to postpone the house rising up one man, and with unquenching indignation indored his closing sentiment—Give me liberty or give me death." History says that one of the delegates said, "I have often heard it said, he would give five hundred pounds to recall his vote, it was so terrible to him." and reminds us of the solemn passage of the ordinance of secession in 1861. John Adams and Patrick Henry were the orators and carried the day by storm. There was no fighting their patriotic eloquence. It was like a battle, wild and overwhelming everything. The like of it had never been heard before, and Daniel Webster said would never be heard again. Let the young men of this age read that history and it will do them good. In fighting emotions like this are born. All the romances ever written. It is far more sublime than Burke's impeachment of Warren Hastings, for the cause was greater and the men were greater. The old independence bell was rung until it cracked, and strong men burst upon the scene and wept.

We are what we are, and almost as much as anything very much outside of principle. We would not call it a very great oppression now. The biggest thing was a little tax on tea—a sort of tax that did not protest. Nobody drank tea but the English and the Yankees. The stamp had been repealed two years before. But all the southerners from Maryland down were just as mad about that tax as it had been on whisky. There was no whisky here, but New England's rum was. The Yankees were fighting round the cities of the country of brotherly love. They went to fighting, and they whipped the fight, and it was glory, and they are all proud of it; but if we had not fought it would have been a terrible trial. John Brown was the first to be hung, and he was the last to be hung. He was born to be hanged, and there would have been more amendments made to the English constitution than you could tote on a stick. When these rebels made a constitution after the war was over, Patrick Henry and Ben Harrison refused to sign it. John Brown was the first to be hung, and he was the last to be hung. The concerts of the famous Mexican band have been the sensations of the season. La Paloma received three or four encores every time it was played.

Loss by Fire in New York Yesterday.

CENTURY BUILDING ON FIRE.

Hotel Guests Fired from Their Rooms in the Everett House.

New York, July 8.—Smoke and flames poured out of the windows of the big brick building on Eighteenth street, between Broadway and Fourth avenue, shortly after midnight. The third alarm was sent out and guests of the Everett house, next door, were ordered to leave their rooms.

The burned building forms the rear of what is known as the Century building, as it is there that the Century Magazine is published. The fire started in the top floor of Nos. 38 to 46 East Eighteenth street, G. W. Alexander occupies a look binder. The fire was got under control at 1:30 a.m. The whole upper floor, extending from street to street, was burned out, the rest of the building, including all of the fifth floor, occupied by the Century Magazine company, was deluged with water.

Most all of the 100 guests of the Everett house left the building, after hurriedly dressing, and took other quarters. Mr. Wilson, in coming down the fire escape at the Everett house with his wife and child, fractured his leg. There was no other casualty.

The first floor was occupied by Johnston & Faulkner, upholsterers; the second floor, on the Seventeenth street side, was occupied by Thos. Nelson & Sons, publishers and importers of the Oxford Bible and prayer book; the Eighteenth street side was occupied by Worthington & Smith, millinery goods; the third floor was occupied by Thos. Nelson & Sons; the fourth floor by Earl & Wilson, collars and cuff manufacturers; the fifth by the Century Magazine company, and the sixth by George W. Alexander, book binder. There was great excitement in Union square, and large crowds gathered in spite of the late hour.

Among the guests at the Everett house, which adjoins the burning building, and was too hot for occupancy, were Mr. and Mrs. Frank West, Mr. Carter, from Honolulu. The Everett house was not burned. It is about three stories lower than the building burned, and the firemen did most of their work from the roof of the Everett house. The flames broke through into the fifth floor of the Century publishing department, and then burst through the roof. A good deal of damage was done by water. The fire was practically out by three o'clock this morning and order was restored. In Alexander's rooms there were large quantities of money, and the fire is thought to have had an origin among these.

The Hon. Primus Jones, who gets them with the first bale of cotton and with the biggest and sweetest watermelons in the state, will be re-elected to the legislature from Baker County. He is a man of great energy and popularity. Their losses are as follows:

First floor and basement, Johnston & Faulkner, dealers in upholstery and fine decorations, $65,000.

Second floor, Worthington, Smith & Co., importers of flowers and domestic millinery, $5,000.

Third floor, Thomas Nelson & Sons, publishers and importers of prayer books and Bibles, $15,000.

Fourth floor, Earl & Wilson, Troy Manufacturing company, $75,000.

Fifth floor, Century Publishing company, $10,000.

Sixth floor, G. W. Alexander, book binder, $60,000.

The prayer and gospel service to be held Monday evening at the Second Baptist church under the auspices of the Young Men's Evangelical union will probably be the most important meeting of the kind ever held in Atlanta. The speakers will be the best known throughout the United States for their scholarly attainments, and the opportunity of hearing them preach will be greatly appreciated by the citizens of Atlanta.

In some unaccountable way it has been published that the city council changed the name of West Harris street to Simonds street. This is a mistake. The name of Simonds street was changed to Earl street.

The Rev. John D. Hammond, D. D., who for some years has been pastor of the First Methodist church in St. Louis, Mo., and who has recently been elected president of Central college, at Fayette, Mo., will preach at the Second Baptist church at 11 a.m. today. Dr. Hammond is a brother to Judge W. R. Hammond, of the Supreme Court of the state.

ATLANTA, GA., JULY 8, 1888.

Atlanta as a Show Battle Ground.

The New York Herald wonders why a battle so unsatisfactory as Gettysburg should be made the great show battle of the civil war, and suggests that Vicksburg would answer the purpose better.

This leads us to ask what is the matter with Atlanta? We had a regular bouquet of battles here, with a remarkable siege of forty-two days. If a battle-ground for national show purposes is wanted, the government or parties interested should come down here and restore some of the old forts and breastworks.

A reunion of the blue and the gray on this historic spot would bring to Atlanta more veterans than have ever been seen together on a similar occasion.

CHALMERS, of Mississippi, who was such a red hot democrat that he became a republican, will run for congress in his old district. He will, no doubt, be left at home.

Georgia Bonds and Georgia Credit. A few years ago when Fred Wolfe, of New York, bought three millions of Georgia four and a half per cent bonds for 100 5/16, it was thought that the transaction was the highest evidence of Georgia's standing in the financial world, and so it was; but the recent sale of four and a half per cent bonds to the New York Mutual Insurance company is still better evidence of the financial standing of the state.

The price paid for these bonds is nearly four per cent higher than the price paid by Fred Wolfe three years ago. The Wolfe transaction, it will be remembered, excited the ire of Henry Clews, who manipulated the bogus bonds of the state when the republicans were in charge of affairs; and that shrewd financier made a desperate effort to depreciate the new bonds.

His effort was a failure, notwithstanding the fact that he had the aid of several disreputable firms on Wall street, as well as the sympathy of several prominent newspapers who appear to sympathize with his methods. In spite of Clews and in spite of Wall street, the credit of Georgia is higher today than it ever was before.

The successful placing of these bonds at such figures, while it is an evidence of the high standing of the state, is also an evidence of the careful management of the financial affairs of Georgia that has characterized Governor Gordon's administration.

The republicans are trying to prove that Harrison should be elected because his grandfather was president. This theory doesn't hold good in the North American republic.

Look to the Main Point.

The Southern Alliance, in an able article headed "Look to the Main Point," discusses the question of the relation of the Farmers' Alliance to politics, and makes some very sensible suggestions. The truth is beyond controversy that the farmers have not devoted that attention to politics since the war which the importance of the matter to them, as a class, demands.

It was all very well before the war, when most of the farmers owned their labor and land, that the discussion of economic questions should be left to the professional politician. The farmer was then independent, and if tight times came on him he could sell a negro or two and relieve himself of the pressure. Money was easily to obtain at a reasonable rate of interest, and it was a very sorry man who could not borrow all he wanted in his own neighborhood at seven per cent. This was all changed by the war, and the Southern Alliance puts the case strongly as follows:

Now, when the agricultural people come to look at federal affairs, what is the outlook? The United States banks are debauched from taking security on land. This about means that there's not an acre of American land worth an American dollar. The farmer is compelled to go to the exchange collateral, or may be forced to do so at any time to get currency at a pinch. It has naturally come to pass that "farmers' notes" are tabooed in banking circles.

This drives them to obtain means to their business at the lowest possible cost. Our commissioners are this means about 50 per cent per annum to time purchases. No other business on earth could stand such a draft, even a short time, and agriculture has stood it for years.

This fact is probably well known to every country school boy. The art of eating a watermelon and keeping cool is as simple now as it was in the days of long ago. The rind should be slit with a short bladed knife, so that when the melon is divided the heart of it shall rest in one of the halves in one luscious, juicy lump. The knife should then be carefully wiped and then put in the pocket. Then the cool should be taken off, and the sleeves rolled up. Plunge the right hand under one end of the heart and the left under the other; lift the dripping mass to the mouth and fall to. The juice will trickle down your arms and saturate your face, but what of it? There is plenty to do, though the feast is the rarest to be found on earth.

Brother Editor, of Albany, we salute you! Reuben and Primus Jones, we envy you!

The Indianapolis Journal is not pleased with the position of northern colored voters to hold a convention for the purpose of deciding which party they shall support. The Journal suggests that "the atmosphere of Indianapolis is not conducive to the hatching of any scheme for alienating the negroes from the party." This seems to be in the nature of a very broad hint.

The Meaning of Chautauqua.

DALLAS, Ga., July 6.—Editors Constitution: In your issue of July 5th a correspondent asked the meaning of the Indian word Chautauqua, and you answered it "foggy place." This answer may be right; if so I have been misinformed. I asked a gentleman from Clinton county a few weeks ago if he could tell me what the Indian word saddle bags. He said the country was named from the resemblance to a pair of saddle bags, being wide at each end and narrow in the middle. He said the lake was about 20 miles long, and narrowed considerably in the middle. I do not know that he was correct, but give you his definition for what it is worth.

The First Bale.

EDITORS CONSTITUTION: I have my doubts about the good effect of this annual parade made by Mr. Primus W. Jones's first bale of cotton, so far as the general's concern. Any man in the country has the right to do what he pleases, and does not any more indicate the first bale of the crop. It is the first record, and truly the first bale of the crop. It is the first record, and does not any more indicate the first bale of the crop. A cucumber raised under glass indicates the first of the cucumbers. I do not know how much truth there is in the report that an occasional cockle bur has been found in the first bales in the past. We all know that it takes a great deal of time to get a cockle bur in the year. How much—not being a first bale man—I am unable to say.

A glance at the facts and figures presented by Mr. Brown will convince any unprejudiced mind that the reduction of railway passenger fares brings increased business and increased revenues. The Western and Atlantic has tried the experiment four months—long enough to take it out of the experimental stage—long enough to prove that the novelty of the thing is not the cause of its rush of business.

This is the reason everybody wants to speculate in stocks and nobody wants to farm lands. This is the reason why some men are now worth ten, twenty, fifty and a hundred million dollars. This is the reason why, whenever we start any enterprise in the south requiring money and the issue of bonds and stocks we have to run to Wall street and pay toll, some ten, some fifteen, and some fifty per cent.

Another point is somewhat startling. It appears that the increase in travel is not in proportion to the density of population. The Western and Atlantic's experience shows that there has been a wonderful increase in travel in the most sparsely settled localities on its line. At McDaniel's station, for instance, with a population of less than twenty, 375 tickets have been sold during the last four months, as against forty-one tickets for the corresponding four months of last year. All this has been done without increasing the number of trains, and without adding to the expense of the road.

We feel inclined to agree with Mr. Brown that the results achieved by his new departure settle it beyond question that good passenger rates tend to develop the country, and benefit both the people and the railroads. With the array of statistics before us it is impossible to come to any other conclusion, for it would be absurd to suppose that the Western and Atlantic, and the country through which it passes, are in the nature of exceptions to the general rule.

It is stated that the democrats propose to make Indianapolis the headquarters of their national committee. This is a good idea. Indiana is a very important state in this campaign, and the democrats ought to carry it.

An Interesting Chapter of History.

General Thomas Jordan's article on the battle of Shiloh, which appears elsewhere in this issue, is a valuable contribution to our war literature.

The general's views concerning the alleged "lost opportunity" of General Beauregard in the fight are presented so clearly and forcibly that they will carry conviction to the minds of many readers. Shiloh was a battle of great historic interest, and General Jordan's position as the confederate chief of staff on that occasion lends weight to what he says.

Young Uncle John New, of Indianapolis, is doing his best to scare the heathen Chinee off of Harrison's record; and the Mongolian holds on with the grip of a giant.

The Season of the Watermelon.

Now, while the weather is warm, quite warm—hot, in fact—it is in order for aspiring newspapermen to wipe their pimply foreheads with a red bandana and advise their readers to keep cool. This advice has been curtailed to some extent since it was invented in Putnam county in 1840, just previous to the Harrison freshet. In Putnam when the midsummer sun curled the shingles on the roof and blistered the paint on the slate, the advice was "keep cool; sit in the shade and eat a watermelon."

There could be no better advice than this, and we are reminded of it by an article in the Albany News and Advertiser, describing watermelon day in that thrifty city, and how the editor was hemmed in and penned up with mammoth specimens of this delicious fruit. The attack was so violent that the editor, in self defense, was compelled to announce that Albany is not only the largest melon market, but the market for the pick of a giant.

THAT HELPFUL and suggestive little periodical, the Writer, announces that it has a literary bureau with standing orders for short stories not to exceed 2,000 words, and for stories of 6,000 words for which good prices will be paid, and that the demand for exceeds the supply. Information of this sort should be widely disseminated. An entertaining article on Mrs. Anna Katherine Green is authority for the statement that Chief Justice Waite declared "The Leavenworth Case" to be the greatest work ever written by a woman. It was the legal mind that spoke. "Hints to Letter Writers" says that a square envelope is anathema maranatha to the postoffice clerks, and square envelopes are the fashion, ala,

BROOKS, ALIAS MAXWELL, the alleged St Louis truck murderer, still believes that he will not hang on the 13th. He promises, however, not to commit suicide. He says that suicide would be cowardly and a confession of guilt.

COULD IT NOT be better advice than this, that the editor was hemmed in and penned up with mammoth specimens of this delicious fruit. The attack was so violent that the editor, in self defense, was compelled to announce that Albany is not only the largest melon market, but the market for the pick of a giant.

THE CITY OF KNOXVILLE.

Knoxville has about 40,000 inhabitants, and fewer negroes than Chattanooga or Birmingham. The city never overflows, is healthy, and beautifully situated on the west bank of the Tennessee. It has many elegant residences and some very large manor houses.

Until the Knoxville and Ohio was built, a few years ago, the East Tennessee, Virginia, and Georgia railroad was the only railroad to Knoxville, and was slow. The Richmond and Danville system own that road and the charter through, and the road is probably bottled until some time in the future, when the consolidated roads fall to pieces. Then this line may be built. The Ohio and Mississippi give connection with the Louisville and Nashville at Jellico and with a branch road from Clinton to Oakdale Junction, thirty-five miles with the Cincinnati Southern. It will be seen that the building up of Knoxville so far has not depended on railroads, but on the cities of the valley, with a population of 400,000 people, subscribed over $600,000 to new railroads now under construction. When these railroads are completed, it will be a great railroad center, and there is little doubt the value of real estate will be greatly enhanced.

COMING THROUGH THE GAP.

The Potowatamie road is now under construction and known as the Oneida, Cummins Gap, and Louisville, runs from Knoxville to Cumberland Gap, sixty-four miles. At the latter place it will connect with the several systems that are coming towards Knoxville, and will pass through the gap. As many as forty-five miles of road will be built through the gap, and the road is probably bottled until some time in the future, when the consolidated roads fall to pieces. Then this line may be built. The Ohio and Mississippi give connection with the Louisville and Nashville at Jellico and with a branch road from Clinton to Oakdale Junction, thirty-five miles with the Cincinnati Southern. It will be seen that the building up of Knoxville so far has not depended on railroads, but on the cities of the valley, with a population of 400,000 people, subscribed over $600,000 to new railroads now under construction. THE GENTLEMAN who was unable to keep a straight face, any longer, took the baby back to the carriage, and told the mother all about his interview.

"It isn't possible," the lady exclaimed.

"The resemblance is remarkable," replied the other, as he patted the pink and white cheeks of the laughing infant. Calling to his cushion he said, "Come here and see this handsome baby, and the striking resemblance to my boy."

"I'll have to tell my wife about it," he continued.

"And she did. She stepped out of the carriage, and in the twinkling of an eye disappeared through the door of the bank."

"I guess I'll go," said the party who had been getting all the fun out of the joke, and he lost no time in turning a corner.

GRAND REPUBLIC CIGARS.

TWO MARVELOUS CIGARS

---MADE BY---

GEORGE P. LIES &amp; CO. OF NEW YORK

THE "GRAND REPUBLIC" CIGAR.

This Cigar is without a doubt the most popular Cigar in the United States.

It has been before the public for some time and is almost universally smoked. The filler of the "Grand Republic" cigar is equal to any Havana filler in any ten cent cigar on the market.

This famous cigar sells for only five cents, yet it is acknowledged to be the equal of any ten cent cigar. This is talking very boldly, but that is just what we want to do. We have confidence in the "Grand Republic" cigar and know what we say. We say it has no equal for the price.

We will back the filler in this cigar with $50,000 to be as fine in quality as any Havana filler contained in any ten cent cigar. We do not make cheap goods. We cannot afford it. We have been selling real first class goods and expect to continue in that line.

A few unscrupulous parties have made imitations of our celebrated "Grand Republic" cigars and are selling them wherever they can as our goods. We notify the public not to buy these imitations. They are imitations in truth, and not to be compared with our cigars. Many customers buy these imitations not knowing them to be such, naturally believe that the GRAND REPUBLIC have gone down. Do not be deceived in that way, call for the genuine "Grand Republic." We make them up to highest standard. We have employed counsel to prosecute all those selling these imitations and the suit will be commenced at once. We are determined to have the people smoke the pure genuine "Grand Republic" cigar—a 5 cent cigar as good as any ten cent cigar.

GRAND REPUBLIC BUFFOS !

This is another cigar manufactured by us and is sold almost throughout the civilized world. They have not been before the people as long as our "Grand Republic" cigar, yet they are meeting with great favor everywhere. The Grand Republic "Buffos" are put up four in a pack, and are sold at ten cents a pack. They make a delightful smoke and connoisseurs pronounce the mequal to the best. Their filler is the very finest and is in keeping with all our goods. These, as well as the "Grand Republic" cigars are for sale by the trade throughout the United States. Below are some of the dealers in Atlanta:

WESTERN &amp; ATLANTIC

An Interesting Interview
Joseph M. Brown.

WHAT LOW FARES HAVE

A Thorough Discussion of the Result Reduction in Rates on the Western and Atlantic—Notes of Travel.

Four months ago the Western and railroad announced a reduction in passenger rates to a point below that of the other railroad in the southern states.

It was a wonderful experiment in rail and the result is of interest to every man and child in this broad land. It is different from what it is, it would have meant that our present rates is the standard for many years to come. The wonderful success of the venture is almost certain that it is only a question of time when the people will receive the rates of a general reduction in passenger rates.

A CONSTITUTION reporter talked with Mr. Brown, general passenger agent of the Western and Atlantic road, early and asked him then how the new venture was turning out.

"I would prefer to wait another month," said Mr. Brown, "for I want to give trial. We have tried it three months and see if the fourth month will be the other three. If so it cannot be claimed that it is a mere novelty, however would have worn off long before now."

HOW IT IS WORKING.

In accordance with this suggestion CONSTITUTION reporter called yesterday Brown's office and asked:

"What is the result of the four-month experiment?"
"Well," said Mr. Brown, "as we asked many times whether making a success or a failure of our experiment, and as this question has come up again in rates, as well as from interested in the matter, we are anxious to know what the result of our experiment would be. The rates down or advancing the rates. It is not improper for me to give you a brief summary of what we have done."

"About what was the average rate?"

"The average on tickets which majority of our travel was about 20 per cent, or 16 per cent on fares to each 50 per cent on the Atlanta to Chattanooga."

A WONDERFUL INCREASE.

"And your travel has increased 20 per cent, then?"

"Yes, sir," said Mr. Brown, "we increased more than 40 per cent. So far as it is concerned, the cost of our travel would not be permanent, more than 10 per cent, and said that to bring about this result we had to drop from 20 to 30 per cent, and the bonds to lose money by the experiment. It is not a permanent. It is ever, that they were mistakes, now."

"You may be interested in knowing the general figures stand. I will state that during the month of March at our stations thirty-eight per cent of the tickets we sold during March of 1887, the previous year, and the tickets than during the previous April. May we sold twenty-eight per cent more tickets than we did the previous May, despite of the fact that during May, more tickets than ever did during the month of previous years, and in of the fact that during May, 1887, the Jones revival meetings were going on at Terrell, to which we sold many hundred tickets; whereas, during this May nothing extraordinary in the way sales, in fact, less money than during May of last year, but we term current travel. During fourth month under the reduced rates per cent more tickets than during last year. This would indicate the increase in travel the longer it continues." These figures make the company a little more than I could make it to prove absolutely that the Western and Atlantic Railroad company did not make more than three cents per mile in passenger fares.

"The truth is emphasized when our revenue for each of the four months of previous years under the rate was greater than it was for the month of previous years under the rate.

THE INCREASE UPSET.

"It was claimed, as I have stated, by some of our railroad, the novelty of the cheap rates were the volume of travel for a while, novelty would wear off in a month, and that would drop substantially the old rates, especially permanent effects might be about 10 per cent in the number of travel, and that we would, as rolled along, lose money, had planned our fares per cent. We reading about the novelty of cheap fares and late travel for a while, but claim would be a large enough permanent in travel to give us a permanent increase in travel, which would not have the more temporary claimed, because we were permanent and not a temporary reduction. A man would reason that he can benefit by the reduced fares travel in March or July, and would not mind the expense of travel in March or April. The constant heavy increase in travel is a vindication of our just claim."

"Those will be astonishing figures, do they not go far beyond your expectations?"

"No, sir. If we had expected behind, or to only come out when it, I do not see why we would increase in travel when the began to travel in March or April, for the reduction per ticket, and for we would make money by it."

"Are there any special features sales now which are distinguishing under the three rates?"

"Yes, sir," said Mr. Brown, "the new system of travel which has prevailed with real men for many years past; in ever since there have been railroads that the increase in travel is the result of the population, that if you have a thick settlement, one which is growing rapidly, there will be a constant and increase in the volume of travel in a sparsely-settled country, there little increase in travel, no matter increase the rates until the tickets no charge at all."

A THEURUP.

"You say that the Western and Atlantic system of travel has upset this theory?"

"Yes, sir," said Mr. Brown, "has. For instance, let us take stations on our line. Vining's is of hardly 20 people; McIvor's Allatoona less than 20; Hall's Mill, McElroy's less than 20, and about 25 to 30. The few people in those stations, therefore, is due to people living in the region by the few people at the stations four months of March, April, in 1885 and 1888, respectively, following number of tickets named:

4 months in 1885. Vining's 101 tickets. McIvor's 102. Allatoona 102. Hall's Mill 41. McElroy's 41. Rocky Face 102.

"There has been no boom, no increase of population at any stations, hence the increase in travel, owing chiefly to the reduction."

GENERAL SHERIDAN'S CONDITION.

He Reaches His Massachusetts Cottage
A Little Restless, But Slowly Recovering.

NORWICH HOUSE, NORWICH, MASS., July 8.—The Swatara came to anchor off this village at 2 o'clock this afternoon, after a run of seven hours from New London. About two hours afterwards General Sheridan was brought ashore without any apparent discomfort and is now in his own cottage. He was somewhat restless last night and consequently has been rather nervous today. Nevertheless his circulation continues good and his general condition is quite favorable to us. General Sheridan, whose expected coming has been the leading theme of conversation in New Bedford for the past, arrived today. A large number of strangers were attracted to the spot. The Swatara passed Upton's light and cast anchor at more than a mile from the shore just before 2 o'clock this afternoon. As soon as the ship was sighted, the shore landing place was thronged by curious spectators, as well as by friends of the general.

After about an hour's delay, several boats left the Swatara for the shore. In the first boat were Mrs. Sheridan and two sisters, Mrs. McMurtry, who have been faithful attendant upon the general. A party of sailors was the second boat. These boats pulled to the landing, where the party landed, and the men at once proceeded to the new cottage erected for General Sheridan. At the time the launch belonging to the ship, towing a boat which was a stretcher wherein the general rested, came in toward the shore, to the north and nearly opposite the cottage. As the boat came near, the general, who was in constant view of the spectators, reached out and carefully and tenderly lifted the stretcher up and bore it to the shore. A crowd of spectators, among whom were a number of photographers, presented a picture of the general's arrival. We have not got the grand. And we are going to show our appreciation by selling you for less money than you can buy for in the state.

15c a pair for men's white suspenders, good full length.

20c a pair for men's white suspenders, good full length.

The above two suspenders are simply worth 35 and 50c, if we had bought them in the regular way.

Once ashore, General Sheridan reached his cottage and was seen to raise one hand as if in greeting, and when reached his room he expressed his appreciation of the general's arrival.
